BOUCHER INSTITUTE 2012 SIX-YEAR ND PROGRAM NOW TAKING APPLICANTS

The Boucher Institute of Naturopathic Medicine is now accepting applications for its 2012 six-year Doctor of Naturopathic Medicine Program, a unique offering geared to students who want to pursue a career in naturopathic medicine, but cannot commit to full-time studies.

The carefully structured six-year program, unique to the New Westminster-based graduate-level naturopathic medical college, allows students to attend classes in the evenings and on weekends while they work, spend time with family or attend to other important matters during the day. The program is also an ideal choice for new Canadians and students who desire a slower pace of study or more dedicated time for research.

Students at the Boucher Institute learn from industry-experienced instructors in an intimate classroom environment. An innovative educational philosophy incorporates the principles of hands-on, situational learning, conventional academic wisdom and collaborative instruction.

The Boucher Institute is committed to keeping its student population and individual class sizes small. This offers unparalleled opportunities for individualized and collaborative learning, interaction with faculty, hands-on research experience and—integral to the Boucher Institute mission—clinical experience at the community level.

Students also gain knowledge and experience through the Boucher Institute practicum program. After approximately 1,500 hours of clinical practice, graduates enter the profession with confidence and the knowledge that they are fully prepared naturopathic physicians.

Applicants who are interested in the six-year program are encouraged to apply early, as space is limited.
